It was presented in the Bengali language. He was awarded the title "Father of Cricket". He was the first to arrange an international cricket tournament between countries and also arranged the first World Series Cricket. According to an article published in the Kolkata based Swadeshi Jagaran Manch, Chittaranjan Deb went to England to meet the then president of MCC, Lord Harris. When Deb met the President he showed his cricket skills to him. Deb also wrote "Not a Soft Ball", an article in the Indian Express newspaper to champion the case of Indian cricket. After that he wrote several other articles and books on cricket. In May 2006 he was awarded the Padma Shri by the Government of India for his contributions to the field of cricket. Death Chittaranjan Deb was the guest of honor at the Goa Cricket Association Awards function in 2003. On the evening of 15 October 2003, he collapsed in his hotel room at the Goa Cricket Association's DY Patil Stadium, and was immediately rushed to a hospital. He was dead on arrival and was cremated the same day at the Ganesh Mandir crematorium. Legacy For the last 25 years of his life Chittaranjan Deb was involved in promoting the game of cricket in India. He was keen to ensure that India became a serious contender to other nations, and was an active campaigner for the introduction of professional cricket in India. He has been credited with changing the national perception of cricket. His book "Not a Soft Ball" was released in 2002, in celebration of the centenary of cricket. Deb himself wrote "This is to confirm that this is my last book. But I've got to write another book. In fact, I'm writing a new novel. I've decided to name the novel "The Test Match"." Deb's nephew, Vivek Kumar Deb, who studied at St. John's College, Cambridge, is an English-language essayist and author of fiction and non-fiction books. He writes for the Times of India and was the cricket expert for Hindustan Times during the ICC Champions Trophy 2007. His books have been translated into French, Hindi, and Swedish. The Chittaranjan Deb Memorial Cricket Academy was inaugurated at Doon School, Dehradun on 28 September 2005. The Chittaranjan Deb Memorial Trophy is presented to the 1st XI or the best all-rounder of the 1st XI team 82157476af
